

Ghost Girl in Next Room

SPECIFICATIONS:

Date: Unknown

Location: Possibly Texas

Photographer: Unknown

Type Camera: Unknown

Other Information: None available

Another interesting photo is this one I also found on the web back in 2000. Again, I have few details about the picture other than the couple who shot it supposedly didn't notice the little girl watching them from the dining room at the time they took the picture (detail at right), nor did they have any other children. It has been speculated the figure could be a child's doll, but I understand that the couple denied they had any dolls (the baby certainly appears too young for dolls yet) and I find it difficult to imagine the couple would deny having such a thing on hand when it could be easily checked out. If it is the ghost of a child, however, what is she doing there? Could she be attracted to the display of affection being displayed in the next room—or perhaps could she just be a little jealous at having to share “her family” with a newborn?

This particular apparition appears to be especially solid. Notice how sunlight reflects off the side of her face, exactly as it would a living child.

