Attempting to get a shot of the dinner arrangement on the table, the woman didn't see the spectral figure in the background at the time she took the photo and only spotted it later. The figure does appear to possess a good degree of motion blur, suggesting a stuck shutter and someone caught moving through the frame quickly, but the woman claims there was no one in the room at the time besides herself and, according to the camera's metafile information, the photo did not have an overly long exposure time. Additionally, with a stuck shutter, there is usually an overall blurry effect on the entire photo, but as you can see, details of the setting remain clear and sharp and even the candle flames--which usually illustrate camera shake well by appearing as streaks of light--show no evidence of a stuck shutter. All in all, a very interesting photo. (Photo used with permission. All rights reserved.)
