This picture was sent to me by a gentlemen from Franklin, Tennessee. It was shot in April of 2011 off a cell phone and shows what he believes to be the spirit of his recently deceased grandmother in the doorway on the left (arrow). He also claims the woman's dog, also deceased, can be seen at the bottom of the photo. I admit that initially I couldn't make the dog out, but I finally spotted it. It's down in the lower right corner of the doorway (circled in yellow above). If that really is a dog—and not just a bit of matrixing—it would be the first photo I've ever seen that showed the apparition of both a human and an animal in the same shot, as well as evidence that pets can remain loyal companions even in death.

Unfortunately, the image quality is poor and the photo was sent without its metafile data, making it difficult to ascertain anything with clarity. I'm reasonable certain, however, it's not a Photoshop trick or motion blur, nor do I perceive any evidence of it being a hoax. Of course, it could still be an iPhone hoax, but it has a certain inexplicable "feel" about it that rings authentic, and the gentlemen has been very good about discussing the image as well. All in all, a very good capture. (Photo used with permission. All rights reserved.)

Is that really the ghost of a dog? I can just make out its nose and eyes. Can you see it too?
