

ORIGINAL IMAGE

PRECEDING
PHOTO TAKEN
9 SECONDS
EARLIER SHOWS
NO ANOMALOUS
SHAPE ABOVE
HATCH

ENHANCED BLOW UP OF ANOMALOUS IMAGE

Shadow Ghost on the Queen Mary

SPECIFICATIONS:

Date: July 12, 2015

Location: Onboard the Museum Ship/Hotel
Queen Mary in Long
Beach, CA

Photographer: Name withheld

Type Camera: Canon
Powershot A2500

Other Information:
Vessel has a long and
rich history of paranormal activity

The luxury liner Queen Mary, permanently docked in Long Beach, CA, has a long reputation for being a hotbed of paranormal activity, and this photo suggest that it is still keeping that tradition alive and well to this day. The woman who took this photo was on a tour with a paranormal group onboard the vessel in July of 2015, during which time she shot numerous photos of several locations throughout the ship with her Canon Powershot camera. While none of the other photos show anything unusual, this single photo, one of several taken near the ship's pool area (the women's showers, to be exact)--an area particularly famous for paranormal activity--revealed something interesting. While the photo is far from clear, it does appear to show a definite shape near the upper left hand corner of the door at the end of the corridor that wasn't in any of the previous shots. (Immediately preceding photo, taken just nine seconds earlier, also shown above.) Brightening the photo and pulling up the contrast (seen above and to right) makes it appear to be a human head, somewhat in profile. Note that the shape also covers several frames to the left of the hatch seen in the previous photos, suggesting that whatever it is, it has a degree of mass to it. A trick of light and shadow or a true apparition? Take a look at the close up, enhanced image to the right and decide for yourself. (Used with permission. All rights reserved.)

