This intriguing photo shows what appears to be a partial, full-body apparition standing in the background at a wedding reception in 2013. Notice in the close-up how the face seems to disintegrate and become increasingly transparent from the eyes down.

What makes this photo especially compelling is that several photos were taken with various cameras/cellphones from approximately the same vantage point within seconds of each other (several of which were sent to me for comparison) but the figure only appears in this one photo. This tends to discount the possibility that someone either unwittingly or intentionally wandered into the photo without anyone noticing at the time (though it wouldn't explain the unusual characteristics of the partially transparent nature of the face).

The woman who sent me the photo (top left in red dress in photo) suggests the apparition looks eerily like her friend's (standing to her immediate right in the black dress) late mother-in-law. Following up, I asked if she had any photos of the woman's mother-in-law and she sent the photo on the right. Comparing the two images side-by-side, I see some similarities, especially in regards to the hair. As the lower half of the apparition's face appears to be transparent, however, it's difficult to tell further, but it wouldn't be unusual for a dead relative to make an impromptu appearance at a joyful event such as this (see photos 6 and 13 for a comparison). In any case, an excellent "capture" that defies easy explanation. (Used with permission. All rights reserved.)
